School Report.

The annual report of the Newington School Board for the year ending Aug. 1st, 1898, is herewith respectfully submitted:

To administer wisely and faithfully the duties belonging to the school board, to see that the many interests of our town are properly guarded and the sum appropriated by its citizens is judiciously expended, demand both time and care, often involving personal sacrifice; and in presenting the annual report, the chairman desires to express her appreciation of the business-like method and hearty co-operation manifested in the affairs conducted by the board.

Following the usual custom, the table of general statistics accompanies this report for reference and comparison.

The number of scholars enrolled is the same as last year. The average daily attendance, we regret to record, is 2 per cent. less than last year.

The question of regularity of attendance in our school is one of the most difficult with which we have to deal. Much as we are striving to do for the advancement of our children, we realize that our efforts will be of little avail unless we have the hearty co-operation of the home; and we feel that the fault lies, for the most part, with the parents. Parents, will not you join hands with the School Board, whom you have selected as being worthy of this trust, and by seeing that your children are in their places, regularly and punctually, help to make ours the ideal country school of New Hampshire? Then, too, an occasional visit will show your interest, and stimulate both teacher and pupils— their work is to be seen, and they will strive to do that which may be commended.

During the past year our school has suffered considerably by change of teachers.
Perhaps the most noticeable advancement during the year has been in singing. In April, 1897, music was introduced as a regular course of study, under the supervision of Miss Lucy M. Hoyt of Portsmouth; and after a year’s work in this branch we feel that the results thus far obtained have been most satisfactory, and we anticipate continued improvement in the coming year, when Miss Hoyt will spend a half hour every week in each room.

In these days children are taught to sing by note, to read music, to comprehend music, and, “To so acquire the art and science of singing as to add one more factor to their education—the cultivation of the aesthetic faculty of our nature that in this hard practical life is so often neglected.”

At the regular meeting of the school district, held March 31, 1898, the town voted to appropriate three hundred and fifty dollars, ($350) to be used at the discretion of the School Board in repairing the schoolhouse.

Realizing the number of repairs needed and the small appropriation with which to make them, we have carefully studied plans of schoolhouses, consulted with teachers as to necessities and conveniences, and had one who has made scientific schoolroom arrangement a study, look over our building; as the result of our investigation we have decided upon changes which we believe to be the most scientific, hygienic and pleasing arrangements possible to be gotten from our present schoolroom. This room which is 32 by 33 feet, is lighted by three north and three south windows. We shall divide it into two rooms, a primary and a grammar room.

The primary room will be 10 by 32 feet, lighted by two west, one north and one south window, and will be furnished with twenty-two new desks and ninety-five square feet of the best slate blackboards.

The grammar room will be 23 by 32 feet, lighted directly by two north and two south windows, and indirectly by the light from the two west windows coming through four large windows in the partition, and will be furnished with twenty-six new desks and one hundred and thirty-two square feet of the best slate blackboards.
Both rooms will have freshly-painted walls, new hardwood floors, and will be ready for occupancy Sept. 1.

These arrangements afford for the first time in the history of the town the possibilities of two distinct and partially graded schools.

We would recommend the introduction of drawing as a regular course of study; a set of advanced music readers, the selection to be left to the music teachers; the adoption of a course of study similar to that laid out by the State Normal School, and the employment of two teachers throughout the year.

We would call attention to the fact that seventeen new volumes have been added to the school library during the present year.

In conclusion: There are few country towns offering advantages equal to those of Newington for the development of an ideal country school.

We have as many school weeks and more school hours than our neighboring cities. Our teachers are rarely denied new books or supplies. The town has granted the use of the hall and the Shakespeare Club the use of the piano, when such would prove useful or pleasing in the furtherance of the work. Our children nearly all come from real homes; not of luxury, but of comfort. Our parents are ever ready to "lend a hand" in the preparation of home studies.

But these favorable conditions place great responsibility upon those charged with the management of the school; for the future is largely dependent upon the policies of the present. Forty-seven children mean forty-seven human possibilities for infinite good or terrible evil.

Our efforts have been for what we considered to be for the best interest of these children. We have tried some things which have not succeeded.

Some things attempted have succeeded beyond our anticipation.

In few cases have our ideals been reached. It is well that it is thus. "Ideals fully attained are too low to be of much service in lifting this world Godward."
We believe the outlook for the year to come is the brightest the school has ever known.

SEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

The end of another year's service as custodians of this trust makes it incumbent upon the Board of Trustees to present their usual statistics, and other matters of interest, showing the important part this institution is playing in the progress and culture of the town. This report covers the operations of the library for the official year ending February 15, 1899. Though many plans for usefulness have not been carried out, ideals with which we started have not been lowered. The library is no longer an experiment. The place it has gained in the hearts of the people it must be its ambition to deserve and retain. Its blessings are so manifest, it needs no trumpet.

In addition to the usual routine of library work devolving upon the trustees, two long cherished projects, which have been kept in the background on account of other more urgent needs, have been consummated. One has been the completion of our system of charging, by the introduction of card pockets and charging slips, a convenience which will prove of advantage to all using the books; and the other special work has been the embellishing of the interior by tinting the walls and ceiling, with the addition of frieze and moulding, and the more difficult task of restoring the floor to its original presentable appearance.

Those who have so kindly volunteered their services in assisting in manipulating the books are entitled to the thanks of the officers of the library. While their aid has been valuable to the managers, they have themselves derived great benefit from the opportunity to widen their knowledge of the scope of library work in detail, and so have been fitting themselves to serve the best interests of the library, either as counsellors in library control, or as custodians of the books. The experience of the workers during the past years in setting the machinery in motion has been an excellent training school in library science and practical management. The work accomplished for the Langdon Library during the few years of its existence abundantly repays the efforts put forth in its behalf. Citizens are invited to acquaint themselves with matters pertaining to library progress and administration as shown in the periodicals and other publications regularly supplied to the reading table; and they are especially urged to read all the bulletins and reports of the State Board of Library Commissioners that they may be posted in the standing and requirements of our library as compared with other libraries, in order to have a clear comprehension of the present and future demands for the best possible service.

The two-book system, which we early adopted, permitting borrowers to have their dessert with their solid mental food, tends to desirable results. Borrowers take a novel for recreation, and are invited to take also a book of history, travel, science, etc., for more leisurely reading. The scheme is advantageous on the same principle as access to shelves, and other privileges giving patrons the fullest use of the books. Valuable books that are seldom taken out are by this plan placed in circulation, and it is of special advantage in families where the number of cards is fewer than the number of books desired.

The value of a library depends on the readers rather than on the contents of the book-stacks. It is only when the best books reach the readers that the work is efficient.
Parents, teachers, and librarians should use tactful oversight of children's reading in counteracting the tendency to read ill-adapted books. A reading habit which will prove both a safeguard against temptation and an inspiration to a nobler life should be cultivated. Teachers especially should acquaint themselves with the books in the public library which will best supplement their instruction, in order to recommend the most suitable books to their pupils. A library does not offer minute information upon every subject; but it does provide general information upon most lines of thought.

The child who habitually frequents the library becomes familiar with its workings, learns the use of its catalogue, learns why certain books are always in certain places, and learns that rules must be observed, and quiet maintained, in order that the rights of others may be conserved.

The preparation of a card catalogue is one of the demands which the near future will bring. No better method has yet been devised for presenting a knowledge of the resources of a collection of books to those seeking information. Reading lists should be prepared to aid in the selection of desirable courses of reading for different classes of readers. An annotated catalogue is another need which should be met. Bulletins should be posted showing in what volumes or periodicals topics of current interest are discussed. Lectures from time to time should be provided with special reference to library interests. These lectures need involve no expense.

It is fitting here to note the transfer of our former librarian to a higher state of usefulness, and to express the hearty appreciation of the present executive board, and of all members of earlier boards of trustees, of her patience in the faithful performance of the sometimes trying duties connected with the organization of the library, and its experimental years of management. She loved the work, and the love of those she served so well is part of her re-erward.

Her successor brings to the work a love for books, a cultured, well-stored mind, a discriminating taste, and a recognition of her opportunity to make the library an educating, refining, elevating influence.

Special attention of patrons is invited to the study of the specimens of natural history exhibited in their season by the librarian, accompanied with descriptive pages from the best authors, or with queries relating to the object presented for inspection. Profitable studies have been furnished on successive Saturdays from the exhibits in botany, zoology, and mineralogy. These exhibits with the handsome pair of mounted birds, the hooded merganser, rare in this locality, presented to the library by N. P. Coleman, should serve as the nucleus of a valuable collection of the fauna and flora of this vicinity.

Commenting on the small library buildings of Massachusetts, a western writer says, "Nothing can be more suitable, impressive, and generally desirable than their collections of fine paintings, statuary, and specimens of natural history or antiquities arranged along the walls of vestibules and reading rooms." He emphasizes the necessity of making the small library buildings practical and beautiful. Inexpensive pictures are admirable for study of the story each tells, the artist who conceived the original, and the gallery containing it. The standard of refinement attained by a community is fairly estimated by the condition of its public buildings.

The fifth anniversary of the dedication of the library was observed in September, in a very pleasing and profitable manner:
and the thanks of the library officials are due to the many friends who so cordially responded, by their presence or by letter, to invitations to assist in making the occasion memorable and instructive. The reception at the library was not the least enjoyable feature of the day, as many of the out of town guests had participated in the exercises of dedication, and were hearty in their commendation of the changes five years had brought about. The series of structural improvements, considerable accession of new books, rearrangement of space, additional furnishings, and wall decorations, were all the subject of favorable comment. The general spirit of appreciation, expressed by our citizens, of the advantages afforded through the foresight and generosity of the founder of the library, in seizing the opportunity of attaching his name to a monument to his devotion to the interests of the community in the home of his adoption, was made the subject for congratulation; and the sentiment was voiced that our people may well look back over the past few years of the library’s existence with satisfaction, and forward upon its future with confidence.

The exercises at the town hall on this occasion consisted of vocal and instrumental music by Misses Faye and Lucy Hoyt and Mr. Willis Ricker, and addresses by Miss Garland of the Dover library, Rev. Dr. Robie of Greenland, Channing Folsom, State Superintendent of Schools, J. C. Simpson, Superintendent of Portsmouth Schools, Professor Barrett Wendell of Harvard, President Murkland and Professor Scott of Durham College, and Frank W. Hackett of Washington. Space does not permit extended comment on these addresses, all of which were helpful and inspiring. Particular mention should be made of Mr. Hackett’s plea for a local historian, who should collect and preserve in permanent form all items of general interest relating to the annals of the town. Every town library should specialize in the field of local history.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTIONS DONATED.

Y. P. S. C. E., Christian Endeavor World,
W. C. T. U., Union Signal.
The opening of the puzzle book donated to the library by Marcus M. Hoyt in 1894, remained an unsolved problem until this year, when Mr. E. C. L. Morse, of Medway, Mass., interpreted the riddle and disclosed the interior and its contents to the satisfaction of the librarian, leaving the mosaic sealed as he found it for other geniuses to sharpen their wits upon. Capt. J. M. Smith of Portsmouth is entitled to the thanks of the trustees and patrons of the Langdon library for the handsome chandelier which he has recently donated to the reading room.

In addition to the foregoing financial statement, one hundred thirty-five dollars have been appropriated from Mr. Langdon's special donation to the trustees for the following purposes:—$88.52 for improvements on walls and floor, and $46.48 for card pockets and slips, periodicals, binding and rebinding books.

The policy of the successive boards of directors of this library has been shaped to make the library vital to the intellectual life of the town, and potent in its influence for the good of all. That library management which is true to the highest ideals must refine the taste of its patrons, and lead them to read judiciously. Carlyle said all the villages in his vicinity had jails, while none had a public library. He evidently regarded books as weapons with which to fight vice and crime. Libraries are less expensive than prisons, and much more effective. No expenditure of money brings such immediate returns as that invested in libraries. Some one has said that the good soldier treasures the laurels he has won, but enters upon his next campaign in expectation of greater victories. In view of what has already been done, the Langdon Library may safely promise its patrons better service in the future. The board of trustees presents the foregoing for the approval of their fellow towns-men; and asks no greater reward than their commendation.

Respectfully submitted,

SARAH F. DE ROCHEMONT, Board of Trustees.
